It underlines our desire to be the leading Irish retailer who is down-to-earth and takes real care in delivering good value food for today's consumer, directly into the local communities in which they live.

But here's another secret: A new organic eatery called Real Food, Real People is looking to change that. "The name represents everything we stand for," said owner Lauren Lavoro, who opened the eatery in Huntington in September.

We wanted to know exactly what we were putting into it and that meant real food, with real ingredients. We are on a mission to help people change the way they look at food...because our good has truly changed.
