Bubbles are wet and they need to stay wet, but when they touch something dry, that dry thing absorbs (we've been using this word with the children a lot at school and many of them understand what it means now) a bit of the bubble's water and makes a hole in the bubble.

Bubbles, Bubbles Everywhere! That was the question I had when I first realized there was a Bubbles show at Science World at TELUS World of Science. Then, after watching the show and learning more about bubbles leading up to doing my own first Bubbles show performance, I learned that there is actually a lot of science and math involved.

We all had fun at our Summer Enrichment Camp this week! Bubbles, Bubbles, Everywhere! We made wonderfully bubbly crafts including bubble painting, bubble wrap painting and we even made a BUBBLE SNAKE MAKER!

As for drinking the bubble solution, that shouldn't be an issue when a parent/caregiver is supervising. The activities in this article are meant for young children (under the age of 4). A child of this age should never be left alone with bubble solution. And the learning opportunities will only occur with parent/child interaction.

Bubble fun is on our list as well, so I will have to make these big wands. I love the photos. The bubbles look like they are going to eat the kids. I love the photos. The bubbles look like they are going to eat the kids.
