The original recipe in my book has a literal mistake in it, the first part of the text demands 22 minutes baking time, in the detailed description it says 35 minutes. That’s quite a difference! I prefer chocolate cakes, that are smooth, moist and fudgy – just melt in your mouth, so I went with the shorter baking time. Since I made this cake at least four times now, I adapted the perfect baking time for my spring mould and oven, which is 25 minutes.

These are products containing chocolate, but not chocolate. As a matter of fact, many diets suggest eating one square of dark chocolate each day.
