Moses Laboy is one such bartender who has mastered the past, while continuing to play in the present. As the cocktail and beverage director at Bottle & Bine in midtown Manhattan, he presents a cocktail menu heavy on culinary ingredients and experimental flourishes, like an entire subset of "butter-washed" cocktails. Still, his favorite drink to whip up at home remains the humble Negroni.

It's a fantastic cocktail and the zing of a freshly-made lemon drop martini is a pure pleasure in the flavor department. Make a quick switch in the ingredients and you can enjoy a variety of vodka martinis without spending a fortune.

2. COLLINS. The Tom Collins would be one of the most well known of the Collins', made using a sweeter style, Old Tom gin. The collins cocktail is a great base to create variations by adding complimentary components and flavours such as elderflower, lychee and other fruit flavours in the form of fresh fruit, syrups and liqueurs.
