As museums redefine the value and meanings of an artifact by taking it into their collection, its digital counterpart on the Web challenges the frame of reference one more time. Thus, re-location of objects is not new to museums, but its very rationale. Museums are experts in framing objects in ever new contexts, and the Web is just one of them.

Museums face unique challenges related to their social, political and ecological environment. They play a key role in development through education and democratisation, while also serving as witnesses of the past and guardians of humanity's treasures for future generations.

Museums and galleries embed reflective practice into their work: internally, with community partners, and across the sector, to ensure ongoing reflection, dialogue and openness to challenge, alternative values and
