Rachel Notley's dramatic triumph over Alberta's Conservative regime was an early rumble before the Trudeau landslide. Alberta has long been seen as politically paralysed. But it has always been a cauldron of discontent, producing the Reform Party, the Wildrose movement, the modern Conservative

It remains a pleasant shock that Alberta is no longer a political monolith. Why Rachel Notley's NDP triumphed and how well they are governing have occasioned considerable debate since the election in May 2015.

The political upheaval that swept conservatism out of office in 2015 had shown its first tremors there five years earlier. Progressive mayors were elected in Calgary and Edmonton, and soon it became clear that the province's PC government was falling out of touch with modern Alberta.
