Q. “Which is correct, on behalf of myself and my family or on behalf of my family and I?” Monica Aldridge, neither choice is correct. The preposition “of” should be followed by a word in the object case (“me”) not in the subject case (“I”). Using a reflexive pronoun (“myself”) also doesn’t work.

It should be on behalf of ... and myself, I would like..... This is because one person (I) is speaking on behalf of another as well, but only 1 person (I) is speaking, so it is I, not we speaking.

On behalf of “myself”? Who cares! These highly successful people earn their living relying on talents other than their ability to put words together. Who cares! These highly successful people earn their living relying on talents other than their ability to put words together.

If you say, “On behalf of the group and me, I would like to thank you for ... ,” it emphasizes that you are part of the group and that you agree wholeheartedly with the consensus. It is fine to use it this way. However, I think it is unnecessary. I much prefer “On behalf of the group, I would like to thank you for” It is much cleaner. The underlying assumption is that you are part of the group.
